

Online Learning

The extraordinary circumstances brought about by the coronavirus pandemic have called for extraordinary responses. Amongst the most notable is the quick and almost total switch to on-line tuition in many universities located in affected countries, including the University of Malta.

In this context, the fully on-line B.Sc. Programme of Studies in Health Science, offered since 2009 by the Faculty of Health Sciences at UM and supported by the IT Services team, is a pioneer. A detailed admin guide is provided for each study-unit, for which there is also a road-map summarising the intended outcomes, resources, activities and assessment methods in each phase. The course includes a blend of real-time and asynchronous activities with timely feedback being provided throughout.

This format also enhances the receipt of students' and external examiners' feedback, leading to richer input and reduced turn-around time for course improvements.
