

UM reduces capped programmes

The University of Malta is committed to continuously streamline and enhance its admissions process, as part of its ongoing efforts to widening participation in higher education. In view of this, a number of programmes that used to limit the number of student admissions have recently had their capping removed.

So far this has resulted in a 27% reduction in capped undergraduate programmes and a 19% reduction in capped postgraduate programmes. This exercise is intended to render the admissions process more efficient. There are cases of courses that merit capping in view of a number of reasons, especially practical sessions.
