

Students' voice matters

PSY2650 is an optional 2-ECTS study-unit offered by the Department of Psychology, designed to facilitate student participation in a number of meetings within University structures such as Senate, Council, Faculty Boards and Boards of Studies, as well as in Senate-recognised Student Societies.

Students are encouraged to register for this study-unit, which enables the development of interpersonal, group and communication skills. It also fosters an increased awareness of the impact of student participation within the University's structures and its response to societal needs. To register for this study-unit students must be student representatives on one of the various boards of the University of Malta or a committee member of one of the student societies recognised by Senate.
